

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of monitoring employee online activity, including: importing firewall log files to a database to generate master activity files, wherein the master activity files includes data on Internet usage, e-mail usage and dial-in connections; importing current employee and company organizational structure information to the database; using the master activity files and the current employee and organizational structure information to produce summary reports on employee on-line activity; and providing the electronic summary reports to employees in response to a request for the information from the employee, wherein the summary reports include information on the employee as well as all other employees under the employee in the company organizational structure.

09985427-110704